CHAPTER XIX.
Omens and Portents

The letter that lay beside Hilary Strangways' plate one morning about a fortnight after Dolly Egerton's disappearance was from Mr. Langton. The address was the Hotel de la Marine in a fishing village on the north coast of France.

"My dear Strangways,—I feel that I have been treating you badly keeping you in suspense. You know what has happened. I was obliged to tell Margaret. How I hated it. But it had to be done! She took it like a heroine. They have disappeared for the present, even from you; from me, unless I am needed. Margaret was wild to get her mother away—where she would hear nothing. We have found what we believe to be a safe place. What will happen afterwards, I do not know. We have taken the first step. Afterwards—Who knows but the world may end tonight?"

Yours faithfully,

Gervase Langton.

Hilary's reply as anyone might have anticipated who was aware of his disposition, was to take the Continental express. Luckily he had plenty of time for it—and to arrive at the Hotel de la Marine, Audignac, sometime in the early afternoon.

He was met by a white-aproned patron with a manner of beaming affectionateness, who welcomed him warmly and informed him that Monsieur Langton was absent and not expected till the hour of dinner.

Madame, sitting behind a range of many-colored bottles, knitting industriously, lifted her olive-hued face, which the long blue ear-rings became amazed, and reminded Gustave that Monsieur had walked to Marquette to see the church.

"It is possible that after Monsieur has refreshed himself he may wish to walk across the dunes to meet Monsieur Langton, who always returns the same way."

Monsieur refreshed himself, and was shown his bedroom, which was in the Chateau du Bois, just across the road from the Hotel de la Marine. His host and hostess both accompanied him to make a selection of his room. They were obviously proud of their possession of a Chateau du Bois which they used as an annex when the hotel was full to overflowing, and it had been up to the first week in September. The Hotel de la Marine had little room for guests. Monsieur should have the Chateau du Bois, himself. He would not feel too solitary. Why, the Chateau grounds were alive with birds. It was just such a green solitude as Monsieur and Madame had pictured to themselves when they had lived in Paris, before they had come to this villainous place. Presently Monsieur and Madame were going to retire on a modest competence and live in the Chateau du Bois in company with the blue-eyed black-gowned daughter, when they had lived in Paris, before they had come to this villainous place. Audignac he had a mind to stay a bit, unless events brought him back to England sooner than he expected. As he went down the village street he met a cure, a brisk, red-faced little man, with a mop of red curls, who greeted him with a beaming smile, and would have passed on his way if Hilary had not stopped him. Hilary had a gift of tongues which had been very useful to him in the career he had chosen for himself.

He explained easily to Monsieur le Cure that he was to be housed in the Chateau du Bois, but that he did not wish to sleep there till the floor of his room had been scrubbed, the draperies and carpets turned out of doors, and the windows cleaned.

M. le Cure understood perfectly. He shrugged his shoulders over Monsieur and Madame and the Chateau du Bois. Would Monsieur like to go elsewhere. There was a wide, low, an excellent creature—whose rooms were of a cleanliness. True, she followed the business of wash-woman, which might not be altogether agreeable to Monsieur. Still for his part he would prefer that to the Chateau du Bois, which was closed in by trees.

Good-natured Hilary preferred to stay at the Chateau, fearing lest he should offend Monsieur and Madame Dufour, whom he found an interesting couple, true Parisians cast away in this Ultima Thule, far from artists and theatres, the boulevardiers, all that made life living.

Well then, the Cure would send him at once a woman who could communicate with her. Margot would bring her scrubbing brush, her pail, her soap. Would it not be well if Monsieur had a fire in his room so that the floor should dry after being washed and not run the risk of giving Monsieur cold? Margot would be home by this time.

He worked for an English motorist who lived over there—the Cure indicated the swelling line of the dunes against the sky—but she came home to her little house at five o'clock in the afternoon. M. le Cure would give her all instructions. Poor Margot was a pitiful creature of the good God—a saint, almost, a penitent.

They parted with compliments on either side, and Hilary following the instructions he had received turned off across the sand dunes. He found the upward sloping road and took the turning on his right, the old Church of St. Pierre, which stood solitary amid its graves out on the lonely dunes.

He had seen the church, and the village of Audignac and had thought it very near. It was in reality more than a mile. The old twelfth century church, built on a strong, supported on its great arches, had an air of being pressed into the earth. The graveyard, full of wooden crosses blown one way and the other by the sea wind behind its embankment, the tops of crosses peering over at the living who passed that way down to the cheerful village. Many of the dead of Audignac were not in the churchyard, but in the gray sea, by which the village lived, by which the church was so near.

Up and up the road went, between the dunes covered with coarse grasses on which the sheep cropped. At the top of the dunes there was a house, or Hilary conjectured it to be a farm house, hidden away behind a bank space of eyeclass wall. He went on and met a shepherd keeping his sheep, wearing a smock-frock and carrying a crook. The shepherd's amiable dog came forward and fawned on Hilary, who stooped to pat it, and had to listen to the history of the creature and its family, from the shepherd, who led a lonesome life up here and had the look in his eyes of one who perpetually has the sea wind blowing in his face, a clean austere look.

Future for Canadian Fisheries

"I predict a wonderful future for the Canadian fisheries," said Major Hugh G. Brier, in charge of the fish supplies for the overseas Canadian army, and the imperial board of trade. "If the war were to end tomorrow the British fish trade would not be reorganized for at least five years. The Canadian fisheries should produce $100,000,000 annually instead of the $34,000,000 produced today."

Wooden Cars Disappearing

Wooden passenger cars will some day be as scarce as woodburning locomotives. In January 1 of this year there were in use in this country 15,754 all-steel cars and 6,136 with steel underframes, although in 1909 there were fewer than 700 of either kind.

Three Years Too Late

Peace Proposals Might Have Had More Weight Three Years Ago

If the pope, immediately after his election in September, 1914, had issued the appeal for peace which his now makes, it would have been an act of Christian statesmanship worthy of the great organization which he heads. At that time peace on the basis of the status quo ante without reparation, with an agreement for general disarmament, on the broad principle of forgive and forget might have been possible, so that the allies were concerned. It would have failed probably through the scornful rejection by Germany, who was then looking forward to a easy and early triumph and the mastery of the world, but it would have established the influence of the Vatican in the right quarter.

Three years of war, however, with its experiences of every form of frightfulness and savagery, have made it quite impossible for the civilized world to place the confidence in Germany which it might have given then or to feel that it can again trust its security to any promises of the present German government. More than that, the world of civilization cannot consent that any of the principles which are at the base of German policy and ambition shall be further recognized.

The matter of reparation is not merely one of justice, but primarily of future security. Unless Germany pays a heavy penalty for what she has done, she will never take to heart the lesson that she must not do it again. The penalty must be heavy enough to convince the German people to a man that they cannot afford a government that presumes the ideas and principles for which the present German and Austrian governments stand in this war; that they must win back their place among men by accepting the modern ideas of liberty and democracy and repudiating wholly the ancient barbarism of race domination by force. It is three years too late to talk of peace on the old status quo. The pope should have proposed it when Germany was winning; instead of waiting till Germany has abandoned hope of the world conquest and is on the verge of collapse.—Buffalo Express.

Cruel Von Bissing

Belgium's Hard Master Had Reputation Even Among Prussians

An Englishman writes: Von Bissing, the Stavenhagen, who was notorious in the German army for years before the war as a cruel martinet. He had been in retirement for some time before 1914—in consequence of cavalier treatment of the kaiser on a certain occasion—when he was considered the right man to bully the Belgians because of his reputation for brutality in Germany.

No man, of course, was so directly responsible for the murder of Nurse Cavell as Bissing, and Huns at home may rest assured that no one could have carried out the deed of unutterable rage more ruthlessly than he.

The enslavement of poor Belgium's men is, I suppose, in furtherance of Governor-General von Bissing's proclaimed ambition to rule the conquered kingdom by "love."

Beginning Early

"Dad," said the little maid of twelve summers, "every morning when I am going to school the boys catch hold of me and kiss me."

"Well, Ethel," replied dad, looking over his newspaper, "why didn't you run away from them?"

Ethel fidgeted and cast her eyes down on the carpet.

"I did one morning," she said hesitatingly, "and they didn't chase me!"—Chicago Herald.

British Aviator Fell Into Jungle Amid Wild Beasts

When Engine Stopped, Aviator on African Front Spent Days in Jungle

Terrible experiences of a British aviator in the East African jungle are told by him in a letter received by a relative. The aviator, Lt. G. Garrod of the Royal Flying Corps, went up to bomb a German ambush on the Rufiji river, but through engine trouble had to descend in the bush, the machine landing with broken propeller in a bog. It took him four days to make his way to a place of safety through the bush, infested with wild animals.

He tells how in the dusk he was confronted with an ugly black animal about four feet high, with vicious tusks. He climbed a tree and prepared to put in the night there. Later he opened his eyes and saw something like two green snakes about thirty feet from the tree. They moved round it in a circle. This continued for forty-five minutes. He goes on.

"The tension was unbearable. I wanted to scream, shout and yell all in one, but instead I burst out with 'The Admiral's Broom.' and with a full throated bass I roared out the three verses. No applause, but a reward—the leopard slunk away. Why had I not thought of it before?"

"I went through my repertoire. I laughed as I finished 'Two Eyes of Gray.' It seemed so ridiculous. When I got to the end of the third verse of 'O God, Our Help in Ages Past,' and sang the 'Amen,' too. The whole thing had its ludicrous side."

Next morning while swimming a river he passed seven yards from a crocodile's mouth, and just reached the bank in time to see a lion with its arms—his only weapon of defense his nail scissors—his progress through the awful bush was about one hundred yards in an hour. His clothing was in ribbons, and his flesh exposed to the thorns, sword grass and flies.

He swam seven more rivers that day and sank down exhausted against a tree. He could hear a lion roaring about five hundred yards away, and a monkey nearer, the grunting of a hippopotamus.

"Being exhausted, I more or less lost consciousness for perhaps half an hour or so. Nothing of the sort of a hippo charging could have made me climb a tree. An afraid life had little to offer about that time."

It was while lying here that the lieutenant "had the annoying experience of surveying two large baboons, the size of a small man, quarreling over my trousers, now in threads, and among the tops of 40-foot trees."

It was not until he passed another horrible day and equally terrible night in the bush that he at last was picked up by some natives.

"Their eyes seldom left me," he adds. "Undoubtedly I was a strange sight—my legs bare and bleeding, my short vest sodden, dirty and torn, no trousers of course, just a dirty hand and with four days' growth of beard on my dirty face."

Is "Alright" Allwrong?

A father writes that his son has been seen at school using the schoolmaster for using the phrase "all right" in its amalgamated form "alright," and asks if the latter is not an abbreviated modern form as legitimate as any "alreedy." Far from being a modern upstart, "alright" is as a matter of fact, of very hoary antiquity, being used by English writers of a very early day. It may be anathema to the pedant, but it has its niche in the "Oxford Dictionary."—London Daily News.

If a man loves a woman he will give up smoking for her sake, but if she loves him she won't ask it.

Death-Blow to Belgian Industry

German Plundering of Every Line of Trade and Commerce

The Germans are continuing to "keep in hand" with vigor and minutia the interests of the Belgian population and, it must be admitted, their "solicitude" is especially noticeable in Flanders, which is not at all surprising, since they have gained them a separate administration.

On June 18 the frontier correspondent of the Amsterdam Telegraph sent to his paper the following information which was published under the heading of "The Belgian Industry's Death Blow."

"We have mentioned some time ago the requisitioning by the Germans of all articles consisting in copper and of all precious metals. Saturday the burgomasters of all the communes in the military area in the eastern and western Flanders, and a section of the Hainaut, have been compelled to make a declaration of a certain portion of the full existing supply of raw iron, of flat iron, of steel, of tin and of machinery."

"According to an ordinance of the chief commander of the fourth army, van Armin, all this material is requisitioned. This wretched requisition, which gives the death-blow to the Belgian industry, comprises the following also: steel of every kind, bar iron, tin and steel of every thickness and dimensions, sheet iron and steel, comprising all cast pieces, all the fixtures, both on windows and doors, locks of all kinds as well as padlocks, for every quantity exceeding twenty-four pieces belonging to any and the same owner, every kind of small wares, such as nails, screws, brackets, for every quantity exceeding the total weight of five kilos, belonging to the same owner; tools of every description, such as gimlets, awls, axes, files, pinners, hammers, winches, cocks and pump fixtures, building tools of all kinds for carpenters, locksmiths, farriers, coach-makers, fitters, terrace-makers, masons, stone cutters, cooper-smiths, glaziers, building painters and decorators for every quantity exceeding six pieces, belonging to the same proprietor. Besides, they requisition also steel of every kind in bars or in ingots and sheet iron of all description."

It is, therefore, a methodical plundering of every line of trade and commerce. No indemnity has as yet been mentioned. The oppressor only states that the requisitioned articles shall be removed by the local commandant against remittance for the goods received. The delinquencies shall be punished by a maximum imprisonment for six years, by a fine not exceeding 40,000 marks and by the forfeiture of all goods not declared or withdrawn from the requisitioning of building implements."

The division inspector, von Schickfus, notifies all the inhabitants of Flanders that it is forbidden to create the construction of houses, manufacturers or other buildings for the civilian population. All the building material now in the hands of building contractors, in warehouses or in the builders' houses, such as cement, lime, sand, gravel, brick, clay and fuller's earth, cement and drain pipes as well as iron of every description, are requisitioned.

"They likewise requisition all the wool proceeding from the sheep-shearing, within the same area limits. The list of all the present supply must be delivered to the commandant on or before July 21. Raw wool is paid 2 francs or 2 fr. 75 centimes."

Note and Comment

One of the peculiar phenomena of life is found in the fact a middle-aged joy rider seldom gets injured in the company of his own wife.

Germany is possibly beginning to suspect that she has no monopoly of the justly famous "will to win."

Word has again been received that a daily mail service will be put into effect, shortly, between Lacombe and Kerobert, and thus doing away with the system now in force.

An advertisement is just like an electric fan, just keep it going and people are sure to get wind of it.

The ice box propagates a chill
The furnace holds a flame;
But either costs so much to fill
The finish is the same.

There will be no sale, this year, of school lands in this district. The sale in November will include such lands as are located in Townships 32 to 40 and in Ranges 8 to 11. The upset prices range from $7 to $16 per acre. Place of sale at Coronation.

We wish to inform young men who are desirous of joining the Army before Conscription is put into force, that the Army Medical Corps is still recruiting men for Overseas service, and the present may be the last chance they will have of joining this popular unit. Under conscription it seems likely that there will be no chance as to the branch of the Army in which a man will serve, and we would urge eligible men to take advantage of this privilege before it is too late. We realize that there may be some who are under the impression that voluntary enlistment is already at an end, and we wish to correct any misapprehension there may be in this regard. By application to Recruiting Headquarters, A. M. C. Training Depot No. 13, Sarcee Camp, Alberta, full information can be obtained.

Navy League to have Branches in all parts of Canada

Branches of the Navy League of Canada (affiliated with the Navy League of the British Empire) will be formed in every city, town and municipality of the Dominion, and will absorb the British Sailors' Relief Fund work, which has been such a success during the past year.

The Navy League is a strictly non-political organization, whose object will be to spread information regarding the importance to the British Empire of the maintenance of naval supremacy, and during war time to assist in the work of relief of sailors' and seamen's institutions. The work formerly looked after by the British Sailors' Relief Fund Committee will also be looked after by the League.

It is the intention of the League to keep before the citizens of Canada the great advantage of the Navy for the Empire and in imparting to the younger generation, through the teaching of the use of the sea power, in all the schools, a knowledge of the importance of the Navy as a protection from invasion and as a means whereby the commerce of the country is safeguarded.

J. A. Irvine of Calgary, who has done a great deal of work in connection with recruiting for the Imperial and Royal Canadian Volunteer Reserve, and also the British Sailors' Relief work, has been asked to organize the Province of Alberta for the League, and also to arrange a Special Tag Day in the interest of the Sailors, to be held on Saturday, October 20th, to be known as "Nelson's Day." Arrangements are also being made to have this day set apart in Canada as a Special Day for the men of the Navy and Merchant Marine.

The Committee are endeavoring to interest every man and woman, Daughters of the Empire, Women's Council, Patriotic Societies, Teachers in the schools in the Brave Sailor Boys.

The Navy has done a marvelous work in connection with the present war. They have escorted our soldiers across the ocean without mishap; they have protected our coast line from invasion; they have kept the ships of the Kaiser bottled up and the trade routes open, so that our grain and produce and general commerce has been transported to the Mother Country with very little hindrance.

Day after day, and night after night, through sunshine and storm, these brave men have stood at their post guarding and protecting our interests, and we in turn should do all that we can to assist them.

Every man, woman and child in Alberta should feel a keen interest in the cause of the Navy League and be willing to assist in connection with Tag Day, and also the formation of the League.

As soon as local Committees are organized, a Convention for the Province of Alberta will be called, and it is expected that Lieut.-Col. Williams will attend from the East and be one of the principal speakers of the gathering. A Provincial Committee will then be formed to carry on the work.

Full information regarding Tag Day and the League can be obtained from J. A. Irvine, 201 Leeson & Lineham Block, Calgary, Alta.

Youthful German Soldiers Blamed

Germans Claim That Boys Cause Regiments to Become Demoralized

The examination of German prisoners taken by the British continues, and out of 940 questioned more than 25 per cent. were found to belong to the 1918 class. Non-commissioned German officers relate how they are hampered by the demoralization of the younger recruits with whom they are supplied. They say they cannot rely upon these youngsters, and similar complaints are heard about the inefficiency of the young German officers in the battle of Flanders. The demoralization of certain German regiments at Langemarck and Polygon Wood was complete; and this was due, according to captured non-commissioned officers, to the presence of eighteen-year-old youths in the ranks.

It Eases Pain. Ask any druggist or dealer in medicines what is the most popular of the medicinal oils for pains in the joints, in the muscles or nerves, or for neuralgia and rheumatism, and he will tell you that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is in greater demand than any other. The reason for this is that it possesses greater healing qualities than any other oil.

Science and the War

Canada Will Need to Use All Experts When Peace Comes

Addressing the Empire Club of Toronto, Prof. McLennan, head of the physics department of the University of Toronto, and member of one of the English war inventions boards, urged similar devotion of scientific energy in Canada for war purposes. Attention was paid by the speaker to conditions after the war, when he said, the national debt would be very large. He advised that the scientists turn their attention to the development of agriculture as the surest way in which the export industry of Canada might be made to exceed the import industry. To do this he advocated the further development of the natural stands of Potash for fertilization found in British Columbia, and the utilization of our water power to make this into fertilizer. Prof. McLennan asked the business men and manufacturers of the city to co-operate with the Royal Canadian Institute, of which he was the president, to further the practical use of science both in the war and in the business life of the nation.

For Bulk Grain Shipments

Orders to Stencil Inches on Railway Cars

The railway board has acceded to the request of the Alberta Pacific Grain company, and others, asking for an order requiring railway companies to stencil inches in box cars suitable for shipments of bulk grain in the prairie provinces, thereby establishing a load line. The order states that with existing conditions of traffic and the demand on railway equipment it is impossible to fix a time limit for the completion of this work. The cars are to be stenciled for repairs and the new cars which are being put into the grain traffic are to be so equipped. The board points out that its order cannot apply to foreign cars, which are estimated to represent from twelve to fifteen per cent. of the rolling stock in use at a given time.

Hun Critic Says Britain Must Be Beaten On Land

Otherwise Hope Must Be Abandoned for "Honorable" Peace

Gen. von Ardenne, military critic of the Berlin Tageblatt, warns the German army leaders that they must bestir themselves to find some strategic or tactical means of winning a decisive victory on the western front, and of defeating England, the soul of the hostile coalition, on land; otherwise, he says, there is no hope of bringing the war to an honorable end for Germany. German leadership, Gen. Ardenne maintains, always has been able to direct the campaign into new courses when stagnation threatened, and he adds that the Germans are entitled to believe methods will be found to force mighty England through battles on land to seek peace. The military critic intimates this might be done by an attempt to overwhelm the French army, which, he assumes is weakened and discouraged, before the arrival of American assistance, which, he says, would leave England isolated.

EVERY WOMAN'S RIGHT

To every woman belongs the right to enjoy a healthy, active, happy life, yet nine out of ten suffer years of agony, usually from some form of bloodlessness. That is why one sees on every side pale thin cheeks, dull eyes, and sagging features, signs of headaches, weak backs, aching limbs and uncertain health. All such suffering women should, with the aid of well by releasing their weary bodies with the new, rich, red blood that promptly transforms this new, rich, red blood is supplied in abundance by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which reaches every organ and every nerve in the body.

Through the use of these pills thousands of women have found a prompt cure when suffering from anæmia, indigestion, heart palpitation, rheumatism, general weakness, and those ailments from which women alone suffer. There is no part of this broad Dominion in which you will not find some former sufferer who has regained health and strength through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and this is the reason why these pills have been a favorite household remedy for more than a generation. If you are ailing and will give the pills a fair trial you will find renewed health and happiness in their use.

An Unwilling Tribute

Enemy Now Forced to Admit That Britain Controls the Seas

A third year of the naval war has passed. No single event has occurred so far as the main forces either of this country and the allies on the one hand, or of the central powers on the other, are concerned. Contrast the comparative silence and apparent inactivity of the big ships at sea with the series of stirring events which have happened on the western front, in Egypt, in Mesopotamia and in East Africa in the past 12 months. Is there any occasion for disappointment? In truth, history is repeating itself under our eyes. Fate according to us a degree of favor with which our forefathers a century, or so ago were unfamiliar. For 21 or 22 years they were confronted with an indubitable and embarrassing fact, the command of the sea was in dispute. After the battle of Trafalgar the character of the struggle changed, but it did not end, for it was in the succeeding ten years that, under the pressure of events, the coast-of the navy and its strength in ships and men were forced up stage by stage. The past year's silence at sea, except for destroyer raids and piracy, is the unwilling tribute paid by the enemy to the efficiency of the grand fleet and its auxiliary services.—London Daily Telegraph.

"I dreamed last night that I proposed to a beautiful girl," he could say. And what did I say?" she queried breathlessly.—Tiger.

Queer Scotch Saw Mill

Canadian Bushmen-soldiers Amazed at Miniature Outfit

A Canadian forester describes the mills used in Scotland by the 244th Forestry battalion: The Canadian mills in use are semi-portable ones, cutting from 20 to 30 thousand feet B.M. per day. A Scotch mill, with a capacity of from 3 to 5 thousand feet B.M. per day, is utilized on some operations. These Scotch mills are a source of amusing interest to the Canadian lumber jack. The engine sits on top of the boiler, and the mill is driven by a fly which the logs are fed to the saw on a platform which lies on rollers. These rollers are forced to turn by a man turning a crank, and the platform is pushed forward, thus causing the log to go forward against the saw. Some mill!

YES! MAGICALLY! CORN'S LIFT OUT WITH FINGERS

You say to the drug store man, "Give me a small bottle of freezezone." This will cost very little but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

A few drops of this new ether compound applied directly upon a tender, aching corn relieves the soreness instantly, and soon the entire corn or callus, root and all, dries up and can be lifted off with the fingers.

There is no need to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man, who says that freezezone dries in a moment, and simply shrivels up the corn or callus without irritating the surrounding skin.

Don't let father die of infection or lockjaw from whitening at his corns, but clip this out and make him try it.

If you druggist hasn't any freezezone tell him to order a small bottle from his wholesale drug house for you.

Eat Less Bread

Campaign in England Reduces the Consumption of Wheat

A decrease of twenty per cent. in the wheat consumption of England for the month of July, compared with the month of February, is shown by a statement received by the food administration. The "Eat Less Bread" campaign was inaugurated in England March first, and the decrease in food consumption for the month of March was two per cent., for the month of April four per cent., for the month of May nearly ten per cent., and for the month of June fifteen per cent.

An additional conservation of wheat amounting to nearly ten per cent. has been reached by the establishing of new rules regarding mill-largely.

The saving now being obtained is largely accredited to the intelligent co-operation of women in their homes. The compulsory saving policy, however, was applied to the public eating houses.

Will Relieve Monotony

Moving Pictures Prove Popular on British Warships

The latest films, and good ones at that, instead of the flickery, eye-straining kind, will be shown to the British sailors in their long, arduous wait for the German fleet to come out and fight. Liverpool citizens established a fund which they placed at the disposal of Admiral Beatty for any purpose he might name and the admiral wrote back:

"I can serve this intention in no better way than by indicating the work of the newly-formed Fleet Cinema Committee, organizing moving picture entertainments on each ship. The benefit to the man will be real and lasting and I know of no better means by which their minds can be temporarily withdrawn from the monotony of their surroundings and thereby become refreshed and invigorated to renew their work."

The Dutch Potato Puzzle

German Pressure on Holland Has the Desired Effect

The mystery surrounding the trouble over potatoes in Holland has been cleared up. Under the commercial agreement between Great Britain and Holland, which has been carried out with a fair degree of impartiality, Holland agreed to supply England with so many bushels of potatoes a month.

All went well till Germany, hearing that 12,000 tons were to be shipped to England, demanded 1000 tons at once. This was complied with. Delay ensued in the shipping of English supplies, and once more the Dutch government gave way to German pressure, and shipped what was intended and required, under agreement by England.

On the British ambassador declaring that the consequences would be grave if the English supplies were not made good, the people caught up to the intrigue, and knowing that Germany would still demand her share, and would look upon the 12,000 tons as an extra, they started the agitation which ended in riots.

It is an interesting story, and shows how easily certain interests can be squeezed even in a country that has apparently tried to be scrupulously neutral. The Great Britain insists upon the fulfilment of the agreement.

The Bowels Must Act Healthily

In most ailments the first care of the medical man is to see that the bowels are open and fully perform their functions. The modern Vegetable Pills are so commended that certain ingredients in them act on the bowels solely and they are the very substances alone available to produce healthy action of the bowels. Indeed, there is no other specific so serviceable in keeping the digestive organs in healthful action.

British Prisoners Not Depressed

Are Bearing Themselves Splendidly Under Trying Conditions

The correspondent learns from a neutral traveler recently in Ghent that the German stories of depressed British prisoners dragging themselves through the streets are absolutely without foundation. The traveler witnessed a detachment of British prisoners recently arrived from the Flanders front. They marched through the streets, heading up at a swinging pace, shouting: "Are we down-hearted? No!" They were splendid he said. The traveler also witnessed the constant arrival of long trains of German wounded. The German soldiers, their wounds, any how, often into open trucks, and the witness declares the evidence of their colossal losses is overwhelming.

Germans Talk of The Next War

Idea Has Taken Hold in Minds of Prussians

Gen. von Liebert, in a speech at Rathenow, Prussia, is quoted by the Deutsche Tages Zeitung as saying: "We cannot sign a peace before we have the 'Hindenburg coast, a color of empire and maritime bases. Should we not realize this now, we must prepare to work for it after the war in view of the next war." Gen. Liebert's speech was loudly cheered by his hearers, but it was criticized by the German press. The Vorwärts declared: "This may prolong the war until Germany has been so beaten that even our pan-Germans cannot think of a next time."

Worms, by the irritation that they cause in the stomach and intestines, deprive infants of the nourishment that they should derive from food, and mal-nutrition is the result. Miller's Worm Powders destroy worms and correct the morbid conditions in the stomach and bowels that are favorable to worms, so that the full nutriment of the child is assured and development in every way encouraged.

Heroes Learn Trades

How Canada Cares for Her Disabled Soldiers—A New Chance for Every Defender

A corner of the cobblers' room in one of Canada's military convalescent hospitals has been turned into a barber's shop. The barber, of course, is a soldier, but unable to fight, he has exchanged the bayonet for the razor. The cobblers, too, are soldiers in the same situation, who have exchanged the rifle and bomb for the hammer and last.

That busy room, with cobblers and barber side by side, is a good illustration of the astonishing variety of methods employed by the military hospitals in training to equip Canada's disabled defenders for active service in the field of peaceful industry when forced to quit the field of battle. If a man is found unsuitable for one occupation, there is always another to try; and one of the main objects of the commission is to discover what each man is suited for.

The barber was a difficult man to suit, but he was suited at last. The record does not state the number of fresh wounds inflicted on his wounded comrades by his preliminary operations, but they cannot have been very serious, for his chair became quite a popular resort. It is a self-supporting business, too. The chair and mirror were loaned by a patriotic firm; but the other requisites of the trade are paid for by the soldiers' five-cent shaves.

It is also an educational institution, this barber's corner, like the rest of the room. Ex-soldiers learn to shave the faces of their fellow-citizens and cut the hair of their fellow-citizens by the way, to mend their shoes, or to act as carpenters and metal workers, draughtsmen and tinners, bookkeepers and beekeepers, gardeners and engineers.

A few, quite unfitted for their old trades, will need special training for new occupations, and will receive it freely, as well as money allowances for their families' support while they are being trained. But nearly every man is able to earn a good living when he comes out of the convalescent hospital. It remains for his fortunate fellow-countrymen to help him over his life, to see that he always gets the work he is best able to do.

SAVE THE CHILDREN

Mothers who keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets at home, will feel that the lives of their little ones are reasonably safe during the hot weather. Stomach troubles, cholera infantum and diarrhoea carry off thousands of little ones every summer, in most cases because the mother does not have a safe medicine at hand to give promptly. Baby's Own Tablets cure these troubles, and if given occasionally to the well child will prevent their coming on. The Tablets are guaranteed by a government analyst to be absolutely harmless even to the newborn babe. They are especially good in summer because they regulate the bowels and keep the stomach sweet and pure. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Animals Under Fire

Cats Do Not Mind Machine Guns or Shells

Different animals will act differently under heavy bombardment, the same as different men will act differently. Dogs, as a rule, have shown great distress when shells burst near them and howl piteously. On the other hand they have been known to dash along the front of a trench during infantry fire, barking and apparently enjoying the noise. Cats don't seem to care whether they are shelled or machine guns are trained on them, as long as they have a dry corner and food when they are hungry. There have been instances of lost dogs and cats actually venturing into British trenches during an engagement. Some of them lived in cottages near the firing line, others strayed a long distance. A west country yeomanry contingent was adopted in the thick of a fight by a black cat, which survived a bombardment that killed many men, and has since lived snugly in a billet with an identification disc around its neck.

Constancy

When Masculine Constancy Turned a Sudden Somersault

A story about Lord Kitchener, who was often spoken of as "the most distinguished bachelor in the world," is being told. A young member of his staff when he was in India asked for a furlough in order to go home and be married. Kitchener listened to him patiently, then he said: "Kenilworth, you're not yet twenty-five. Wait a year. If then you still desire to do this thing you shall have leave."

The year passed. The officer once more proffered his request.

"After thinking it over for twelve months," said Kitchener, "you still wish to marry?"

"Yes, sir."

"Very well, you shall have your furlough. And frankly, my boy, I scarcely thought there was so much constancy in the masculine world."

Kenilworth the story concludes, marched to the door, but turned to say as he was leaving: "Thank you, sir, only it's not the same woman."

Want To Know Why

Under Democracy We Will Know the Reason

In Germany, under autocracy, they say "Verboten" and that ends it. Nobody dares ask why. In a democracy the multitude is accustomed to ask "why" when anyone says "Verboten." The Kaiser can kick a premier around the block and the plain people may say nothing. The autocrat may decree furlough days if he wishes and woe betide him who asks questions. Under democracy we will know the reason why. We have the right to ask why! One of the first things American children learn is to ask why. One of the first things German children learn is to obey! And to all the children of the earth may have their chance to ask why the democracies of the world are going to kick the last "Verboten" sign off the planet. The eternal desire to ask and learn and reason is going to be entrenched as the supremest thing on earth. And that, in a very plain simple way, is what it's all about. Did you ever stop to think why there are so many Germans in America? Well—Germany is the answer.—Wisconsin State Journal.

Sunflowers Useful

Russia averages in normal times a yearly export of nearly 150,000 tons of linseed, 30,000 tons of rapeseed, and 30,000 tons of hemp, poppy, sunflower and other seeds. The oil obtained from sunflower seeds is suitable for margarine manufacture, and the cake is a good food for live stock. The unrefined oil would compete with nut oil and cotton oil, and the refined product would make a good substitute for olive oil. Sunflower seed is largely produced and crushed for its oil in Russia.

A Confession

To evacuate Belgium is impossible argues the Berlin Tageszeitung, because Belgium would henceforth be an irreconcilable enemy of Germany. Unintentionally this newspaper does its part to confirm the worst that has been said of the conduct of the Germans in Belgium. Other countries have been invaded and have been reconciled, Austria was invaded by Prussia, and a few years later became an ally. Why, then, should Germany, who were in favor of Belgium in 1914, have become objects of such detestation that Germany will henceforth have to rule the Belgians with an iron hand? Outside of Germany it needs little explaining; with Germany explanations are awkward.—From the Springfield Republican.

Unlike most industries, poultry-keeping, if it is to take its rightful place among our Dominion industries, must depend mainly upon the small producer rather than upon the large operations of the poultry farm.

Thus speaks the Director of the Dominion Experimental Farms in his introductory letter to a bulletin by the Dominion Poultry Husbandman, Mr. F. C. Elford, on "Poultry-Keeping in Town and Country."

Mr. Elford goes over every phase of the subject. With a large number of especially interesting and appropriate illustrations, after pointing out the advantages derived and offered by poultry-keeping, he describes the best method of housing and of feeding. He shows that farming can be made more profitable, pleasurable and health producing. With particular reference to the adaptability of women and girls, he mentions two or three classes of people who might well turn their attention to poultry-keeping as a side line. He gives hints and suggestions on the best breeds to have and how to select with good constitutions.

Pigeons as well as all kinds of fowls demand attention.

In short, the publication is a complete and valuable handbook on poultry raising and keeping. Everybody interested can get a copy free by addressing the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.
